

Had a Concussion Recently?

Researchers at the University of Kentucky (UK) invite you to participate in a research study that explores the sex-related differences among those who have experienced a concussion, or mild traumatic brain injury (mTBI). Researchers will examine how a mTBI may potentially impact walking and multitasking, balance, reaction time, and how different parts of the brain work together. Participants will complete all testing in two separate visits to UK's campus.

You may be eligible to participate if you:

- are 18 to 40 years old and physically active
- had an mTBI diagnosed by a medical provider within the last year

Participants will be compensated $100 for completing the study.
