

Brain Injury and Workplace Distraction Study

Researchers at the University of Kentucky are inviting you to take part in a traumatic brain injury (TBI) study. We want to understand how individuals with TBI are impacted by workplace distractions and how it effects their work performance.

This study will require two interviews which can be conducted via phone call or Zoom meeting. These interviews can be taken over four weeks. Participants will be asked a series of questions regarding their volunteer work, workplace environment, and work performance.

You may be eligible to participate if you:

- Are over 18 years old
- Have been diagnosed with mild, moderate, or severe TBI
- Can read and speak English
- Are able to verbally answer questions over telephone
- Have been employed (in the past 6 months)
